trees and shrubs

This section contains the best of flowering and ornamental foliage trees and shrubs and also forest trees such as Chestnuts which will make very large specimens.

The normal planting season is from November to March. Evergreen subjects may be planted from October to April when weather permits; in particularly cold or windy sites, either early or late in the season, preferably. Spring-planted subjects should be kept well watered until established. (Sometimes 2 seasons). A wide range of those listed are available in containers for 'all year round' planting.

Prices quoted in this List are for "open ground" trees in most cases. Container grown trees are priced separately on the Garden Centre.

Size abbreviations:-

- L/T Light Trees, approximately 180-230cm overall height.
H/Std Trees with approx. 120-180cm clear stem, 240cm overall.
Std Trees with 180-220cm clear stem, 260cm overall height.

IMPORTANT ADVICE ON HANDLING PLANTS FOLLOWING RECEIPT

Orders are executed during the planting season, which is from late October until early April, according to weather conditions. Should frost intervene before planting can be done, it is advisable to 'heel in' the plants in a sheltered part of the garden. Firstly, scrape away the top crust of frosty soil so that it doesn't mix with the roots, then dig out a shallow trench, lay in the plants and well cover the roots with soil, lightly firmed, until conditions are suitable for permanent planting. If the above method is not practicable, the plants can be placed in a cool frostproof outhouse or shed, with the roots protected. If they become dried out at the roots, give them a soaking before planting. Balled plants — that is, plants which have a ball of soil clinging to the roots (conifers, etc.) — are now wrapped with thin jute sackings, which is best left on when planting as it will soon rot away and the plant root is little disturbed.

Ensure that the ground to be planted is free from perennial weeds such as docks and dandelions. Peat-loving plants such as Azaleas, Rhododendrons, etc., should have their roots surrounded in moistened peat, well mixed with the soil. We can supply peat in several sizes of pack to meet this requirement.

Always plant firmly. Rotted farmyard manure or bonemeal and peat can often be added to the soil with benefit to the actively growing plants. Stake all standard and half-standard trees firmly. Stakes can be supplied for this purpose; also tree ties. Pot-grown plants should be thoroughly soaked before removing from the pot and planting. It is better to break the pot away rather than damage the roots. Container-grown plants from our garden centre should receive similar treatment, in that any non-rotting medium such as polythene or whalehide pots should be removed before planting. Do not plant when the ground is waterlogged.

HERBACEOUS PLANTS

These can be planted in autumn or spring, except when the ground is waterlogged or during heavy frost or snow. We recommend that in most cases planting of herbaceous plants will be made at this time. If the ground is infested with slugs a dressing of slug pellets should be made after planting.

GENERAL AFTER-CARE OF TREES, SHRUBS AND HERBACEOUS PLANTS

Be ready to water the root system and syringe the leaves of all newly planted trees, shrubs and perennials in the first spring and summer after planting. Large trees may require this treatment for several seasons, particularly when planted on dry banks. Keep weed growth to a minimum by the use of sterile mulches of peat or leafmould, the careful application of Weedol, or by hoeing. Avoid disturbing the developing surface roots and regularly firm any plants which may be loosened by strong winds.

During the first season after planting some subjects will not produce the amount of leaf or growth normally expected of them. Provided there are leaves or growth at all, do not worry, as they will be making fresh root and should grow away merrily in the following year.

Plants for Greenhouse and Room Decoration

Our Glasshouses across the road from the Garden Centre contain an extensive range of House Plants, and our staff will be pleased to help and advise. This department also handles our range of Summer Bedding Plants, Fuchsias, Geraniums etc., in the appropriate season.
